SHIPS' MAILS.

Mails will be closed at the Post Office as follow:—

FOR CHINA.—By the Maggie, this evening, at 6.

FOR MELBOURNE AND LAUNCESTON.—By the Shamrock, steamer, on 1st proximo, at 4 P.M.

FOR ENGLAND.—By the Caledonia (P.O.P.), on the 3rd proximo.

FOR INDIA AND ENGLAND—(Overland Route)—By the Royal Saxon, on the 10th proximo.

The steamer Tamar arrived yesterday from Moreton Bay, with 197 bales wool, 10 bundles sheepskins, and 5 casks tallow. She came out through the northern passage, and has been only forty-eight hours from Heads to Heads.

The Alexander has had a good passage of one hundred and nine days from the Downs; which, considering she is a Post Office Packet, is rather to be wondered at. She has been detained on this coast some time, having now been ten days from Cape Otway. On the 20th instant, at nine A.M., spoke the schooner Phœbe, hence for Port Phillip, about forty-five miles to the south-east of that port. On Thursday last, at nine A.M., spoke the schooner Harlequin, hence for Portland Bay, off Jervis Bay.

ENGLISH SHIPPING.—The James Dean was to sail for Port Phillip about the end of the year. The Theres had been taken up to convey emigrants to Adelaide. H. M. S. Rattlesnake was towed out of Portsmouth harbour on the 2nd December, and anchored at Spithead. The brig Lady Howden was to sail for Hobart Town about Christmas.

The schooner Jane, Captain Steele, has made a very expeditious trip to and from Moreton Bay, having been only eighteen days absent from Sydney. Her cargo consists of 67 bales wool, 31 hides, &c. By her we received the report of the melancholy loss of the steamer Sovereign.

The cargo by the William consists of 95 bales wool, 13 casks tallow, 5 hides, and 2 bundles sheepskins.

WRECK OF THE SOVEREIGN.

(From our Moreton Bay Correspondent.)

MARCH 24.—Fearing that you may not have received the accounts forwarded per schooners Jane and William, of the melancholy loss of the steamer Sovereign, I have forwarded the following statement given me by Captain Cape, the Commander of that ill-fated vessel; in reading that gentleman's narrative you will perceive that every thing was done that human means could accomplish to save the vessel, after the engines had broke down, but there being no wind to allow the sails to act nothing could be done to save her from her fate; the time which elapsed from the occurrence of the accident to her breaking up was so short that little time was allowed to arrange in any way to get the crew and passengers out of her, the loss of life has therefore been awful. The stowing of so large a quantity of wool on deck, I believe 40 bales, besides coal and wood for fuel, was no doubt a means of accelerating their fate. Words can scarcely express the sensation which this accident has caused in our limited community; those unfortunates who have met an untimely fate having friends more or less amongst us; the almost daily accounts which reach town of bodies washing ashore tends to awaken our sympathies afresh. Yesterday, Mr. Clements, one of the parties who so promptly rendered assistance to the survivors, came up to Brisbane and reported that thirteen bodies (ten males and three females) had been discovered ashore near Cape Moreton, by Mr. Richards, and by that person interred, making altogether eighteen bodies recovered from the wreck. Of the vessel herself but little has been recovered, a more total breaking up of a wreck could not be conceived—poor Cape has lost largely, not an article belonging to him being recovered—chronometer, telescopes, books, wearing apparel, and equipments irrecoverably gone, but his life has been providentially spared to his family, and therefore his pecuniary loss is nothing. Reports are rife here respecting the seaworthiness of the vessel, as regards the hull and machinery, but it is hard to judge whether any vessel foundering as the Sovereign did in four fathoms water, with her heavy cargo, would have withstood the violence of the rollers longer than she did, at all events had she held together longer than she did; the loss of life would in all probability been the same; assistance could not have reached her by any human means within reach, to avert their awful fate; the distance from the beach and the heavy surf breaking around them precluded almost all chance of getting ashore alive, unless by a merciful interposition of Providence in their favour; it is a miracle that even one escaped from the overwhelming surf; the strongest swimmers it appears were almost the first drowned. The escape of two boys, Thomas Harvey and James M'Gover was wonderful—the youngest, Harvey, escaped with scarcely a scratch, and appeared when he reached the shore to be hardly aware that he had been placed in so much jeopardy. The exertions of Messrs. Richards and Clements, with the man Hollingsworth, a prisoner of the Crown, attached to the pilot station at Amity Point, who witnessed the accident from the opposite shore, and immediately went over with two boats and crews of aborigines, are described by the survivors as beyond all praise—the blacks were by their unceasing efforts the means of rescuing at least eight of the ten lives saved. The authorities will no doubt find some way of rewarding these poor fellows for their humane efforts. The inhabitants of the district have commenced a subscription in behalf of the wrecked people, and to reward those parties who so nobly exerted themselves upon this lamentable occasion. To Captain Wickham, the Police Magistrate, Lieutenant Blamire, the officer commanding the detachment stationed here, Mr. Thornton, of the Customs' Department, and Dr. Ballew, of the Hospital Department, great praise is due for the prompt manner in which they acted in affording assistance to the maimed survivors, and repairing to the scene of the wreck. Hexton, the pilot, who had on that morning taken out the Tamar by the northern channel, reached the scene of the catastrophe during the day (having walked from the north end of Moreton Island, where he had been landed from the steamer) and promptly rendered every assistance in his power to the survivors, and after dispatching them to his house at Amity Point, took charge of the bodies washed ashore, and remained by the wreck. The loss of the Sovereign in a pecuniary point of view has been most disastrous to the district generally, she being a favourite boat, and her worthy commander, from his years of experience trading to this port, enjoying the good will and confidence of all classes. Subjoined is Captain Cape's narrative of this melancholy affair.

"The Sovereign, steamer, left Brisbane at 11 A.M., on Wednesday, the 3rd instant, with the wind fresh from the southward, having on board 10 cabin and 20 steerage passengers, and a crew of 24 men, with 140 bales wool and other cargo. On reaching Amity Point it was found to be too late in the evening to take the bar, the vessel was therefore brought up off the pilot station for the night. Every succeeding day until the 10th the wind continued from the southward, rendering it inexpedient to go to sea; but in the evening of that day, at 4 P.M., an attempt was made to get to sea, but on reaching the bar it was found it would be imprudent to attempt crossing it; the vessel was then taken back to her former anchorage. At daylight of the 11th the steam was again got up, and the vessel, at 6 A.M., got under weigh, with a light air of wind from the S.W. On getting on the bar she encountered a heavy swell and jobble from the tide rip, but as she has crossed in worse weather, no fears were entertained of her accomplishing the task of getting to sea in safety. On reaching the centre of the rollers on the bar, a heavy roller broke on board the vessel, and unfortunately broke the engines—the vessel immediately stopping her way. On the engineer reporting the accident, the vessel was all but over the bar, leadsman giving the depth of water as 3½ fathoms. Upon examining the engines it was found the plummer boxes of the intermediate shaft had capsized and the framing broke, rendering the engines perfectly useless. No time was then lost in endeavouring to get the vessel's sails to act, but there being but little wind, they were next to useless. At this time the wool stowed on deck had broken adrift, and was carried by the seas over to the starboard side, maiming several persons who were in the vicinity at the time. Another sea carried away the quarter boats, the starboard cat-head with anchor attached, the chain parting at the same moment. The vessel was now drifting unmanagable on the Northern Spit, and it being pretty smooth at the time, a second anchor was let go, which kept her head to the sea: but this soon began to drag, and the vessel continued to drift towards the North Spit (distant about four miles from the beach). Finding that the bearings on shore were altering continually, I considered it my duty now to inform the passengers of their imminent danger,—still few seemed to think so with me, but continued when practicable to assist in throwing the wool overboard from off her deck; the steam had previously been let off to prevent the boilers from bursting. A succession of seas continuing to break over the vessel, every effort was made to lighten her; the fore-hatch and fore cabin companions were washed away clean with the decks; attempts were then made to secure them with tarpaulings, to prevent the seas filling her hold, and all hands kept at the pumps. This preventative was speedily found of little avail, for the green seas kept bursting on board, sweeping every thing away before them, and a few minutes then sufficed to seal her fate,—the unfortunate vessel settling bodily down in about four fathoms water, on the north side of the spit, on the south end of Moreton Island. From the time of the engines stopping until the vessel went down only three-quarters of an hour elapsed, and in five minutes after foundering the vessel was breaking up piecemeal. Just previous to the vessel settling down a number of the crew and passengers (in fact all those who did not appear to be unnerved by the dangers surrounding them) attempted to reach the shore by clinging to the wool bales, but several speedily met their untimely fate. The screams of the drowning at this awful crisis were most appaling. Knowing that the wool that had first been thrown overboard had sunk, I cautioned those parties who were trusting to their treacherous support for safety, and advised those near me to get hold of portions of the wreck, now floating around in all directions, and I am sorry to say inflicting serious wounds upon the persons of those who unfortunately came in contact with them. A portion of the paddle-box having drifted near me, I suggested to Mr. Berkley that we should get on it, as it would float a number of persons; we did so, and for an hour and a half drifted with it in-shore, towards Moreton Island; on closing in with the surf, then breaking with terrific violence on the beach, poor Berkley called my attention to a heavy breaker rolling up behind us, and expressed his fears that it would overwhelm him; the words were scarcely spoken when the breakers burst with astonishing force upon our frail support, smashing it into atoms, and turning me over and over with astonishing rapidity; on emerging from this sea poor Berkley was not to be seen, in fact, from that moment I experienced a succession of submersions, and scarcely recollect anything until I found myself upon a sand hill some distance from the surf, whither it appears I had been carried by the blacks; upon recovering my senses, I, with the assistance of these kind fellows, attempted to rise and walk (being much cut and bruised) and upon joining Messrs. Clements and Richards, to whom my unqualified praise is due for their praiseworthy exertions in assisting the blacks to save life, I pointed out the body of a man in the surf, which upon being brought ashore, was found to have ceased to exist. I was soon joined by M'Quade, a fore cabin, and Mr. Stubbs, a cabin passenger, who had reached the shore, but very much bruised and otherwise injured; the latter person informed me that the body of Mrs. Gore and one of her children had been cast ashore; two boys and two firemen, one seaman, and three steerage passengers, also got ashore, more or less injured by the surf, making ten souls saved out of fifty-four persons."

Such are the plain unvarnished facts of this most lamentable affair, and it is certainly devoutly to be wished that the fate of the unfortunate Sovereign may lead to this dangerous channel being abandoned, unless in very fine weather. The Tamar, on the very same morning, is taken to sea in perfect safety by the northern entrance, without being detained by contrary winds one hour, and why in all cases cannot this route be adopted? What prevents the Government from removing the pilot from his present station to the more eligible one at the north end of Moreton Island? One thing is certain, the coming westerly winds will this winter carry the pilot's dog hole at Amity Point clear away; the surf is already nearly awash with the door-way. Why also is the port left year after year without a proper code of signals? if a Customs Department is necessary here, surely half-a-dozen pounds more could be afforded to purchase a score or so yards of bunting.

PORT FAIRY.

MR. BAKER has published a Chart of Port Fairy, from the survey of Captain Petrie, which we presume therefore may be depended upon. We subjoin Captain P.'s sailing Directions.

Sailing Directions to accompany a Chart of Port Fairy, New South Wales, by Lieutenant P. Petrie, R.N. 1847.

In passing Cape Otway, bound to Port Fairy, a course should be taken according to the winds blowing; if southerly, a sufficient distance should be preserved for keeping off shore in case of a calm—as there is almost always a sea rolling in from about south-south-west, but should the wind be from about east, or east-south-east, with a steady breeze, there is no danger in the way of five miles off along shore; all the way to Port Fairy the shore will be found to have many indentations, and varying widely from any other line of the coast hitherto drawn. There is a considerable bend inwards between Moonlight Head and Port Fairy. Tower Hill, rather conical, is a good guide for knowing when you approach Port Fairy, seen at a short distance inland, and of some height above the general line of land on each side. Warnambool Point may be called the east side of Port Fairy Bay; bearing from the centre of the bay east-half-north, about eight miles distant. The islands forming Port Fairy Bay will be seen after passing Warnambool, with a flag-staff on Griffith's Island. When about six miles from that island, Lady Julia Percy's Island will be distinctly seen when sufficiently out of the line of the bay, a moderately high island, with a table-topped appearance, lying to the south-west of Port Fairy about fourteen miles. When coming from the eastward for Port Fairy, keep outside of a line of about five miles off Warnambool with the outside of Griffith's and Rabbit Islands, till the small hummocks are seen as per view, the middle and highest hummock bearing north-west by north. The hummocks are only moderately high sand hills, but can easily be discerned from the line of land running along in front of Belfast Town, on the River Moyne, which lies immediately behind the Sand Hills. The outer or Rabbit Island has a small opening between it and Griffith's Island. Off Rabbit Island is a reef running about north-east two and-a-half cables' lengths with breakers upon it, but when the winds have been off shore some time and no south-westers, there is little motion, so it must be carefully avoided. To enter the bay keep the lead going, and pass the north-east tail of this reef four cables' length from the east point of Rabbit Island, keeping the middle or highest hummock (before mentioned) a little on the starboard bow, bearing north-west by north till you get six fathoms; steer into the marked anchorage in four and a half fathoms for the larger vessels; the middle hummock bearing north-north-west, being careful not to go nearer the bar of the river than the point of the outward reef, bearing south-east by south, nor into less than four and a half fathoms; and when the windmill bears south-west quarter south, round to and let go the anchor, veering to fifty-five fathoms, and moor as considered necessary, the anchors north-north-west and east-south-east. Take care of a shoal patch with not more than twelve feet upon it, at dead low water spring tides perhaps not more than ten feet will be found. It lies on the left hand, and bears from the outer point of Rabbit Island north by west half north, and the windmill west-south-west. It is a small patch not more than thirty yards in circumference, having some sea-weed floating over, and when the heavy south-west swells sets in, the water appears to break upon it. Smaller vessels have a more sheltered anchorage, the holding ground is very good, hard sand, and with good cables and anchors, a vessel drawing not more than fourteen and a half feet might ride with comparative safety and ease. The anchorage is open from east to south-east, sheltered from the prevailing south-west winds, but the swell from that wind rolls in round the reef, though not frequently endangering vessels, however the danger is not so great as it appears, as vessels are found to ride with easy cables when rolling with the undulation. A breakwater here upon the reef would be of great service, and it is considered that the river might be made available for good-sized vessels by contracting the outset with stones, to clear away a channel on the bar, and which might be kept free by joining the river stream with the current found strongly setting through the inside of the islands from the westward. There are patches of rocks running off from the north side of Rabbit Island about two cables' length, with only one and a half and two fathoms water, the river inside has about fourteen feet, and could be deepened if the bar were opened.

We understand that H.M.S. Rattlesnake was to sail from Spithead about the 5th of December; but as she was to call at Madeira and the Cape of Good Hope, she can hardly be expected before the end of next month.

Much inconvenience and annoyance was caused on Saturday by the refusal of the Post Office to take letters for the Walmer Castle after ten o'clock, it having been stated in the Herald of that day that the mail would not be closed until eleven. The hour of eleven was mentioned in the Herald at the express desire of Captain Thorne, who called at the office at a late hour on Friday, to request that it might be so stated, and as the Walmer Castle did not move until after three o'clock, there was no reason why the mail should have been closed five hours before that time. Captain Thorne had, on the previous day given the Post Office notice that he would sail shortly after ten, but when it was found that the vessel was detained, an additional mail ought to have been made up. The whole plan of shipping and landing mails requires revision,—it is not at all adapted to the wants of the port.

LATER ENGLISH NEWS.

By the Alexander we have received London papers to the 3rd December, six days later than had previously come to hand.

There had been no political event of importance.

The QUEEN and Royal family were well. Her MAJESTY was on a visit to the Duke of NORFOLK, at Arundel Castle.

The funds were rather higher, consols being quoted as closing on the 2nd at 95¼.

Tallow had declined about £1 a ton. Some New South Wales had been sold at 46s. to 48s. per cwt.

Mr. ROWLAND HILL (the promoter of the penny postage system) had been appointed secretary to the Postmaster-General, with a salary of £1200 a year: this does not interfere with Colonel MABERLY, who still remains secretary to the Post Office.

We shall publish our usual supply of extracts in a supplement in to-morrow's Herald.

THE WRECK OF THE SOVEREIGN.

WE published in an Extra on Saturday the Moreton Bay Courier's account of this deplorable event, and we this day give our correspondent's narrative, drawn up from the statement of Captain CAPE. One or two points suggest subjects for observation, particularly deck loading, and the state of the machinery, but they will be more satisfactorily commented upon when the deep excitement caused by the fearful loss of life shall have become softened down. There is one point, however, to which we wish to draw attention, and that is the number of widows and orphans who have been deprived of all present means of support by the death of those on whom they depended; if the Directors of the Company would draw up a statement of these cases, and request the MAYOR and one or two other gentlemen to take charge of any funds that may be raised, we are confident that a large amount of subscriptions for these unfortunate people would immediately be raised.

THE OFFICERS OF H.M.S FLY.

BY letters recently received from England, we have learned some particulars respecting the disposal of some of the officers of H.M.S. Fly, which will be no doubt most interesting to the friends of those gentlemen in the colony. Of Captain Blackwood's present employment we know nothing. Lieutenant Shadwell, First Lieutenant, and Lieutenant Ince, who superintended the erection of the Safety Tower in Torres Straits, are both promoted to the rank of Commander. The latter was to have come out as Lieutenant on board H.M.S. Rattlesnake, Captain Owen Stanley, shortly expected here, but was superseded on his promotion. Mr. M'Gillivray will come out in her as naturalist. Mr. Evans, the late Master of the Fly, is employed in the Isle of Man on the coast survey; he is in the enjoyment of very handsome pay, and is shortly about to be married. Mr. Jukes, naturalist, has joined the geological survey of Great Britain and Ireland, and at the date of his last despatches was busily engaged in the neighbourhood of Bala, in Merionethshire. This gentleman mentions to his correspondents some facts respecting the geological survey, which serve to show what importance is now attached to that undertaking. The Director-in-Chief is Sir H. De la Beche, having under him local directors, with a large staff of officers, surveyors, palæontologists, collectors, chemists, analyzers, &c. The revenue of the establishment is £10,000 sterling per annum, being a Parliamentary grant. The present office is at Craig's court, Charing cross, but a new office and museum are building in Piccadilly.

The Ordnance maps are being rapidly coloured; and sections are making of great accuracy in all directions. Memoirs are also published as the survey goes on.

Mr. Jukes was deputed to write the account of the voyages of the Fly; but he says, he is obliged to give up publishing his journal, "as every book mentioning Australia lately has fallen dead from the press." Even the British Association showed no inclination to hear any details, as "nobody cares about Australia now."

The undertaking of Mr. Leichhardt to cross the continent to Swan River creates some astonishment in London. One letter says, "If he do it, his name will live for ever, but it seems a clear determination to manure some desolate spot with his carcass, and mingle the phosphates and carbonates of his bones with the silex of the desert."

The late expedition from Fort Bourke to Port Essington does not appear to be noticed.

One of the junior officers of the Fly was here recently, on board H. M. steamer Inflexible.

CONVICTISM IN SOUTH AUSTRALIA.—Copies of all correspondence between persons interested in South Australia, and the Colonial Office, respecting the effect upon the colony of the official notice of the Comptroller-General of Van Diemen's Land, of the 21st day of June, 1845, relative to convicts in that colony who were holders of conditional pardons, have been printed by order of Parliament. The first of these documents is a letter from J. H. Croucher, Jun., Esq., to the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Secretary of State for the Colonies. Mr. Croucher writes as the Secretary of the South Australian Society, and in the behalf of that body protests against the admission of conditional pardon men into the colony of South Australia as a virtual violation of the Act of Parliament, 4 and 5 Will. IV., c. 95, by which the colony was founded, and of the Act 5 and 6 Vict., c. 61, for the better government of South Australia, by which it is declared, "That no person or persons convicted in any Court of Justice in Great Britain or Ireland, or elsewhere, shall at any time or under any circumstances be transported as a convict to any place within the said province." This letter is followed up by another reiterating the arguments, and adducing additional reasons why South Australia should not be submitted to the contamination of convict immigration. Similar letters were also addressed to the Right Honorable Gentleman, by D. M'Laren, Esq., on behalf of the South Australian Company. The papers also include a dispatch from Governor Grey to Lord Stanley; stating that there are two great objections to the purposed regulations, one in the prejudices existing against a convict population and the class distinctions to which it would inevitably give rise; and, secondly, the probable effect it would have in determining present settlers to leave the colony, and respectable parties in England from emigrating to it. A second dispatch from Governor Grey transmits a memorial signed by 515 signatures, and adopted at a public meeting held at Adelaide against the proposed regulations. To these remonstrances Lord Lyttleton, the Under-Secretary of State, replied in the first place, that the holders of conditional pardons in Van Diemen's Land, were formerly persons who had received the Queen's pardon on condition of remaining in that colony; but that they had recently been released from that condition, and at present held their pardons subject only to the condition of not returning to Europe. His Lordship also denied that any pledge had been given by Her Majesty's Government to South Australia, or to any other port of the British dominions, to interpose for the purpose of preventing the resort thither of any persons, who having been once convicts had received the Queen's pardon. A subsequent dispatch of Mr. Gladstone to Lieutenant-Governor Robe, denies that the regulation complained of involved a breach of any obligation or pledge to the colonists of South Australia. It further states, however, that Her Majesty's Government, had on general grounds considered it advisable to alter the condition inserted in such pardons, and it had been decided that in all cases of conditional pardons granted in Australia, whether colonial or British, those convicts should have the power of removing to any place which they may desire, provided they shall not return to the country or colony from which they had been transported; this condition to have a retrospective effect.

NEW ZEALAND.—Further documents relative to the affairs of New Zealand have been ordered to be printed by Parliament. The first is a dispatch from Governor Grey to Lord Stanley—informing his Lordship, that he had decided to take immediate measures to make the chiefs of the various villages, being or pretending to be in a state of neutrality, declare either one way or the other, and showing that the result of this determination peremptorily enforced had been signally successful. The second dispatch is relative to the granting of a free pardon to all concerned in the recent rebellion. In this respect Governor Grey informs his Lordship he was placed in a dilemma. In discussing this matter with Walker Nene—the friendly native chief who first waited on Governor Grey with a message from the rebel chiefs, the Governor stated that he intended to pardon those concerned in the rebellion, as soon as they had sent in their complete submission to the Government, and to give them at once security for their personal safety. With regard however to the forfeiture of their lands, he left that question to be decided in England, merely stating that in their future good conduct he doubted not Her Majesty would make the pardons unconditional. His reasons for this were—1st, to retain a hold over the conduct of the rebellious natives. 2nd, To show that they could not rebel without subjecting their lands to forfeiture. And, 3rd, That the act of a free and unconditional pardon might come from the Queen direct. It was, however, subsequently pointed out to Captain Grey, that the instructions of his predecessor in the Government to Colonel Despard precluded this arrangement, as under those instructions an assurance had been given to the friendly chiefs that the lands forfeited by the rebels would be divided amongst them, and that no land would be taken by the Government. These instructions Captain Grey conceived bound the Government up to the date of his arrival, but not being aware of their existence, and having repeatedly made declarations to the natives that he would never permit them to acquire land from each other by conquest, he considered himself fairly exempt in this respect from being bound in any respect by the promise of his predecessor. He considered that promise, &c., impolitic—so little advantageous to the persons it was intended to benefit—and so likely to be regarded by foreign nations, and in other times, as essentially unjust, that he feared ultimately no distinction would be made between the officer who made the promise, and the one who carried it into execution, and he therefore determined to be in no way connected with a line of policy which he felt to be inconsistent with the course he thought Great Britain ought to pursue. When, therefore, he was made acquainted by Walker Nene with the complete submission of the rebels, and the unconditional surrender of the whole of their lands, which they regarded as forfeited, he felt that if he retained the land until Her Majesty's pleasure should be known, that he would be held in distrust by the friendly natives, for not fulfilling the promise of his predecessor. He, therefore, frankly told Walker Nene that he would at once give the rebels a full pardon, and not fulfil his predecessor's promise, because he believed that such a course would be injurious to the interest and reputation of Nene and the other friendly chiefs, for that the moment it was adopted every one would cease to believe that the loyal natives had been contending for the re-establishment of peace and good order, and would think that their real object had been to obtain possession of the lands of others. And further, that if these lands were conferred on the friendly chiefs, that the war must become one of extermination, because as soon as British force was withdrawn, the original possessors of these lands would certainly endeavour to recover them by force of arms, and also it would be impossible to divide it so as not to give rise to quarrels and feuds amongst the loyal chiefs themselves. Nene at once assented to the course, and remarked, after some consideration "you have saved us all." The next dispatch is relative to the difficulty, the almost impossibility, of administering satisfactorily the government of New Zealand, without a change in the constitution of the colony. The division of New Zealand into different settlements, having totally different interests, and equal in wealth and importance, formed the chief grounds of this difficulty. It was impossible in any one of those settlements to find gentlemen possessed of extended acquaintance with the whole island. Nor were they to be found in sufficiently opulent circumstances to abandon their homes for the purpose of repairing to another settlement to fulfil the protracted duties in the Legislative Council. Captain Grey suggests that the formation of municipal bodies, with extended powers, would rather increase than remove these evils; because, feeling the imperfect manner in which the Legislative body discharged its duties, they would endeavour to usurp an authority which did not belong to them, and neglecting their own duties, busy themselves with those belonging properly to the Legislature. They would soon also contract large debts, which would ultimately prove very embarrassing to the Government. As a remedy for these evils, Captain Grey suggests the creation of a Lieutenant-Governorship of New Zealand; the Governor-in-Chief and his Council exercising supreme legislative jurisdiction in one portion of the island, the Lieut.-Governor of the other portion transmitting any Bill passed by his Council to the Governor-in-Chief previous to assenting to it, so that a uniformity in legislature might be kept up. The remainder of the dispatches contain information sent from time to time of the progress of the suppression of the rebellion, all the material facts of which have been narrated in the colonial papers.

MORETON BAY ORDERS.—We have received several advertisements containing lists of orders and cheques of different kinds lost at the wreck of the Sovereign, but have been prevented from inserting them in this morning's Herald. Parties to whom orders from Moreton Bay are tendered should be particularly cautious at the present time.

ALLEGED ILLICIT DISTILLATION.—Mr. Bramwell, of H.M. Customs, having learnt in the early part of last week that a large quantity of brandy, at present a scarce article in the market, had been offered in Sydney for sale, and tracing it to have come from Mr. M'Neish, of Richmond Terrace, near the Kurryjong, proceeded with Chief Constable Ryan, whose assistance he obtained while passing en route through Parramatta, thither on Thursday morning. On arrival at Mr. M'Neish's, (who has an extensive vineyard) in a shed attached to the wine-house a large copper still, with head and worm complete, was found, and the owner produced a wine grower's distillery license, empowering him to keep for his own use a still of not less than twenty nor more than fifty gallons contents. An opinion, however, being entertained that the still was of a larger size than authorised by law, a gallon measure was procured, and on the still being measured it was found to hold fifty-six gallons, Mr. M'Neish alleging that the gallon measure employed, and which was one belonging to him, might not be correct, and the officers, when on business of this nature, ought to bring their own, a second was got from a neighbouring public-house, when Mr. M'N's measure was found to be perfectly correct. The still was then seized and taken into Windsor, where its capacity, on being again tested by the standard measure kept at the Police Office, was again found to be fifty-six gallons. The case has been referred to the Chief Inspector of Distilleries, with whom, under the 11th section of the Colonial Secretary's notice of May, 1846, respecting illicit distillation, rests the decision as to the prosecution for infractions of this character.

ENGLISH EXTRACTS.

TAHITI—NEW ZEALAND.

(From the Morning Chronicle, October 19.)

ALL intercourse with savages must be attended with great difficulties. We have had our attention drawn to an article in the Journal des Debats of Friday last, in which a charge is made against us for having given publicity to a letter we had received from a missionary at Tahiti, in which the achievements of the French soldiery in that island are made the subject of comment. With every disposition to give the French the full benefit of the proposition with which we set out, we confess we should have felt a little more convinced by a calm refutation of the facts alleged in the letter, than by a certain amount of shallow pleasantry and invective against the English missionaries.

The object of the Debats throughout the article alluded to is to institute a comparison between the proceedings of the French in Tahiti, and the English in New Zealand. A certain M. Berard, it should seem, has been inditing a letter to the French Government from on board the corvette Rhin, on the 20th May, 1846. He had left Sydney on the 12th of January, and after a ten days' passage, had arrived at the Bay of Islands. Although it is mentioned that this gentleman was three years on the station, we are left to presume that the four months which intervened between the date of his arrival and the date of his letter at sea were occupied in collecting materials for a voluminous report for the Minister of Marine, of the policy pursued by the English in their possessions in New Zealand; for we find that M. Berard has actually forwarded home a body of reports which are beyond the Debats' powers of publication, and of which a mere extract fills three columns of the closest type.

The glories of Captain Fitzroy's government! What a subject for comment to a keen-witted Frenchman. The assignats, and the customs, and Heki, and the Company's lands, and Rangihaeta, and Major Richmond, and the flag-staff, and the missionaries, and the squabbles between the rival settlements, and heaven knows what of imbecility in its every form. There is one respect, however, in which we defy all the Frenchmen in France or out of it to procure a tittle of evidence to substantiate a charge against this country; and that is, of any act of injustice or inhumanity perpetrated towards the natives in the English name.

Whatever of error there has been, has been on the other side. Had the government of the island been in the hands of our neighbours instead of our own, order would have been preserved, and the lives of the settlers guarded long ago, by the stern, perhaps the unnecessary intervention of the sabre and the bayonet. Utterly repugnant as such a course would be to our own feelings, we are not prepared to deny that occasions may arise when it is necessary to convince a troop of lawless savages that European blood cannot be shed with impunity; and such an occasion did arise in New Zealand when the gallant Wakefield and his companions were murdered by the natives. We believe that any French Governor, in such a case, would have inflicted condign punishment on the parties concerned; and if he had stopped there he would have been right in so doing, and would have ultimately saved the loss of much valuable life, and an indefinite postponement of the development of the resources of the colony.

Let us hear no more of English atrocities in New Zealand. Whatever of atrocity there has been in that country has fallen upon Englishmen, not upon natives. English blood has been shed in plenty, English fortunes have been ruined, English energy has been paralysed in New Zealand. Of all this there has been abundance. With regard, however, to the natives, every contrivance of the most puling humanity has been exhausted, all those manœuvres of beneficent imbecility, which invariably terminate in the ruin of the parties they were meant to benefit, have been put in practice—land purchased and repurchased, has been allowed to remain in the natives' hands, the English settlers have not been permitted to arm in their own defence—the attacks, the armed attacks, of the natives have been met with insufficient force—and even then it would seem too little concessions had been made to the Aborigines; until they had been taught that they might fire upon and kill Englishmen with impunity the lesson was not complete.

The Debats takes great glory to itself for not publishing letters similar in character to the one which we printed in our columns from the Taitian missionary. Might it not just have occurred to our contemporary that no French New Zealand missionary could have favoured his Parisian correspondents with a document of a similar nature, for the very simple reason that he had no atrocities to record? If the Debats (and we know our contemporary has a very extensive correspondence in all quarters of the globe) has in effect a New Zealand correspondent, who discharges his duty honestly, we are of opinion that the directors of the journal at Paris must be greatly edified by the wisdom of the English colonial system.

"It again," says the Debats, "we were to imitate the conduct of the English, and set out formally every reverse that the English arms have met with in their antipodean settlements, what a tale of military failure might we not disclose. But we are too generous," &c., &c.

Either our memory does not serve us right, or we certainly have seen from time to time, both in the Debats and all other Parisian journals, an account, a most faithful and accurate account, in a very prominent part of their journal, of every reverse that any English corporal's guard has met with in any part of the world; certainly our disasters in New Zealand have figured prominently in our contemporary's columns.

So much for the forbearance of the Debats, as evinced in its not publishing missionary correspondence against England, and accounts of military reverses suffered by England. As far as regards the first point, we may say it had no letters to publish; with regard to the second, we say that an account of an engagement in any part of the world in which the English arms are worst off, leaves nothing to be desired in the shape of information.

The Debats then institutes a comparison between the French colony of Tahiti and the English colony of New Zealand. We know as a fact that the utter debility of our Government, the utter lack of timely severity, have been the occasion of much misery to our own colony; we have, we must confess, a very strong opinion that the conduct of France has been directly the reverse of all this in that island from which the native ruler, and that ruler a woman, has been ousted by the power of France. We might say more on this head readily enough, were we provoked to it; but in the mean while we beg the Debats to observe that we printed the letter of our correspondent as a letter, not as the expression of our own opinion. Had the conductors of the Debats received a similar communication from a French missionary in New Zealand, we entertain a strong opinion they would have adopted the same course. In the mean while they will do well to contradict its assertions.

Major Richmond's proceedings in the valley of the Hutt will furnish the Debats with a fine occasion of descanting on English atrocity.

HOME COLONIZATION.

To the Editor of the Atlas.

SIR,—The attention of men of thoughtful minds has latterly been devoted in an unwonted degree to the state of society, and the means of ameliorating the condition of the labouring classes; at such a moment you will perhaps allow me to submit to the notice of your readers certain industrial establishments founded a quarter of a century ago by our neighbours the Dutch. Attempts are, apparently, about to be made, on a small scale, to introduce somewhat similar associations into this country; one of these, a "Self-Supporting Village Society" connected with the Church of England, purposes to found a village in the centre of not less than 1,000 acres of land, which shall accommodate 300 families, where the inhabitants may be enabled "by the produce of their own labour, not only to support themselves, but also to defray the expenses of the establishment—each person, besides being more or less engaged in agriculture, will also be employed in that kind of work for which he is best suited." We know that complete success has followed various well-directed experiments in communion in different parts of the world; with reference, for example, to the Moravians, M. Breuttell, the principal director of the colony of Hernhut, asserts that with regard to "the commercial concerns of the settlements, in his experience of 25 years he never knew a failure." But perhaps the most apposite illustration of the benefits to be derived from self-supporting institutions is to be seen in Holland; the following account is taken from a "Sketch of German and Dutch Husbandry," published in the Journal of Agriculture, No. 2, New Series:—

"The colonies of Fredericksoord and Willemsoord were established, when, after two years of great scarcity, a large proportion of the population was reduced to absolute destitution. A society was, therefore, formed by a few benevolent individuals, the object of which was to give employment to men in this deplorable condition. In carrying out their purpose they conferred not only an immediate and lasting benefit on the individuals in question, but effected great national advantages, first by stemming the spread of vice, and, in the second place, by increasing the national resources by converting to arable land a waste on which even a sprig of heather was scarcely to be met with. Such was the origin of these colonies, twenty-four years ago; and no one can travel the road along which they are situated without noticing the great change that has been effected on the face of the country by their establishment. From a wild, barren country we enter at once a little oasis which bears every mark of prosperity—neat cottages, luxuriant crops, and gardens stocked with useful vegetables and adorned with a variety of flowers. The quantity of land attached to each house is about seven acres. The colonists are all supplied with implements on entering their plat, besides a cow and a pig. There is a regular debtor and creditor account kept; everything they receive on entering is marked down against them, and whenever they are enabled to pay off their debts from economy of living, they are allowed to rent their plats. Attached to the colonies are schools for the gratuitous education of the children, and workshops in which they are taught some useful trade. I passed one of these shops, in which there were from thirty to forty looms worked by the children, and adjoining it was another room, where some were engaged in spinning, mending shoes, and other occupations. I was attracted to the place by the busy clatter of the shuttles, and the sounds of music; and on coming up to it, found the children engaged at their respective occupations cheering on one another by a song. What health, what happiness shone in these pauper-children's faces! Their looks were a sufficient proof of the benefits derived from such an institution." How striking does a sketch like this contrast with Crabbe's picture of the interior of an English parish poor-house!

We spend upwards of seven millions of money annually for, in reality, the mere purpose of keeping the poor alive; since the conclusion of the war in 1815, no less a sum than 200,000,000*l.* has been levied upon the rate-payers. There are 30,000,000 of acres of waste land in Great Britain and Ireland, of which 15,000,000 are considered as reclaimable. The value set upon the possession of ground by the poor may be estimated from the fact that, according to Mr. R. B. Sheridan, the labouring man in Dorsetshire actually gives as high a rate as 9*l.* per acre for a small plat; and it has been stated on good authority that recently reclaimed land in Lancashire and Sussex has yielded a produce, under spade-cultivation, which has realised 60*l.*, and even 50*l.* per acre. With what apparent facility, then, might the waste places of the land be made contributory to the increase of the wealth of the nation, and, at the same time, ministrant to the comfort and happiness of the destitute! What we seem to need is the interposition of some master spirit who, out of the elements of good which we suffer to lie round us unimproved, untouched, shall educe a new order of things and confer upon the nation what Wordsworth calls the "English dower of inward happiness." Before the end of the present century the population of the empire will have doubled itself; will England in that day be a fountain of health and fertility, or will it be "a fen of stagnant waters," filling the atmosphere with baneful influences, and generating misery and death?

MARRIED,

By license, on the 27th instant, at St. Stephen's, Camperdown, by the Rev. C. C. Kemp, M.A., Mr. Richard Johnson, of Sydney, solicitor, to Jane Frances, second daughter of John Morris, Esq., of Camperdown.

DIED,

At Comely Bank, Perth, on the 19th October, 1846, Joanna Stewart, aged sixty, relict of the late Archibald Menzies, Esq., of Pitnacree, Perthshire, Scotland.

TO THE CLERGY.—Many individuals and families having been plunged into difficulty and distress by the loss of their parents and protectors in the late awful shipwreck at Moreton Bay, the Bishop of Australia has advised the Ministers and Churchwardens of the several parishes throughout his Diocese, that the entire amount collected in the Offertory on Easter Day be appropriated towards forming a fund for the relief of the needy and afflicted. It is therefore requested, by his Lordship's desire, that such of the clergy as may not have previously received a direct intimation from him to this effect, will please to regard this notice as a sufficient authority for their proceeding in the manner herein indicated, on the ensuing Easter Day.

WILLIAM COWPER, D.D.,

BEAUTIFUL AND ELIGIBLE BUILDING ALLOTMENTS, SITUATE NEAR THE MARKET-PLACE, AT THE BOTTOM OF ELIZABETH-STREET, IN THE GROWING AND IMPORTANT CITY OF SYDNEY.

TO BE POSSESSED ON MOST LIBERAL TERMS.

TO THE TRADESMEN, MECHANICS, AND OTHER CITIZENS.

GENTLEMEN,—As nearly all the land within the heart of the city is either built upon or purchased for that purpose, whereby a great portion of you may be desirous of possessing a house and premises of your own, within a city of such growing importance as ours is daily,—it has been determined (whereby your views may be realised) to throw open that extensive piece of land, (adjoining and surrounding the Albion Brewery establishment and premises) for building purposes, by opening six streets of 40 feet wide; three of which will continue to meet those laid out on the Strawberry Hills; the other three are to commence from Elizabeth street, in a line with those laid out on the Riley Estate, to the top of Surry Hills; and as it is intended to leave a Square in the centre of this piece of land, two of the streets will pass through it, which will not only add to the beauty of the arrangements, but likewise render the allotments more healthy and respectable; and is intended, as far as practicable, to cause a degree of uniformity in the laying out and buildings, by which this style will be an ornament to the town.

The arrangements give a frontage of 13,218 feet, to be in allotments of 30 feet, by a depth of 73 feet 8 inches; on each allotment there is an abundance of the best water by sinking a few feet.

The conditions on which they are offered to the public (animated by a spirit of philanthropy, which all thinking readers will, I am sure, admit), are on lease for 21 years, at an annual rent of six pounds, (which is at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum on the value of the land, namely—at £4 per foot,) and at the end of the lease, the lessor will be paid half the value of all the substantial permanent buildings he may erect, or at his option, have the lease renewed, for a further 21 years, at an annual rent of nine pounds for each allotment.

Should sufficient applications be made within the next three months, to induce this arrangement to be carried out, the same will at once be adopted.

For further particulars apply to the undersigned, to whom all applications are to be made in writing, and post-paid.

ELEGANT COTTAGES, PYRMONT.
BY ORDER OF THE MORTGAGEE.

MR. GEORGE A. LLOYD

Has much pleasure in announcing that he has been favoured with instructions to submit for unreserved sale by public auction,

AT HIS ROOMS, CITY MART, 474, GEORGE-STREET, ON TUESDAY, THE 30TH INSTANT, At twelve o'clock,

THOSE TWO VERY ELEGANT STONE-BUILT VERANDAH COTTAGES, with out-offices, &c., situate in Mount-street, Pyrmont, a spot more desirable for a private house than any other near to Sydney, having all the convenience without any of the unpleasantness of a town residence—accessible either by land or water in five minutes' time—and is well known, from its commanding and delightful situation, as the most healthy and desirable spot for a residence.

The cottages were built of stone, and the best materials, under the personal superintendence of their owners, and the situation is described in the original deed as follows:—

DESCRIPTION FROM DEED.

"All that piece or parcel of land, situate, lying, and being, at Pyrmont, in the City of Sydney, county of Cumberland, in the Colony aforesaid, commencing at a post on the south-west side of Mount-street; and bounded on the north-west by a fence dividing it from lot 55, bearing south 54 degrees 30 minutes west 115 feet to a part of the Ultimo Estate; on the south-west by that estate, by a fence bearing south 50 degrees east 102 feet; on the south-east by lot 57, by a fenced line bearing west 54 degrees 30 minutes east to Mount-street, bearing north 35 degrees 30 minutes 99 feet to the commencing point, being lot 56 of the Pyrmont Estate.

And being intended for their own occupation, no expense was spared in their erection. Each cottage contains four rooms on the ground floor, four attics with dormer windows, detached stone-built kitchens, out-houses, &c. The front rooms open out with French windows to the verandah, which are covered with zinc and neatly flagged. All the property is fenced in at the rear with close palings, and each cottage has a private gateway.

Mr. Lloyd would strongly recommend intending purchasers to view the property for themselves, when they will be convinced too much has not been said in favour of it.
